L'Environnement Contemporain. Les Annales. 3. Paléo et Chimie des. Corrosion of Paper, wood, and leather. Q: Metadata about the colour of the background of pages generated by Word I am looking for a way to programmatically identify the colour of the background of Word documents generated with a program I am developing. I do not know the page's position within the document, and there may be multiple pages in a single document. I am currently able to obtain the colour of the text in a given page, but no matter what I do, I am unable to identify the colour of the background of that page, even though the page's position is perfectly known. Here is what I've tried: Procedure: Set the app to generate the document with its default colour. Set the application to save the document in a specific location and store the file extension. Open this document with a more specific application. Get the contents of this document as a string. The string now contains the colour of the background of the document. Step 3 now gives no information about the background. As an example, the string from step 3 looks like this: 00000373B38303077494E3E700343535A6E3E3E70 Step 4, using a more specific application, now gives information about the colour of the background
